HUMAN RIGHTS IN PITTSBURGH AND THE WORLD

ASSESSING HUMAN RIGHTS IMPACTS, LIMITATIONS, AND PROSPECTS AT THE 70TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

As the Trump administration flaunts international human rights standards in its treatment of immigrant families and in its withdrawal from the UN Human Rights Council, cities around the country—including Pittsburgh—are working to "bring human rights home" with projects like Cities for CEDAW (the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women) and human rights cities. Panelists will consider key obstacles and opportunities for achieving dignity and justice for all people, including oversights and omissions in the UDHR. Seventy years after its passage, how might today's community-based human rights initiatives better realize the vision of human rights expressed in this critically important global declaration?

WEDNESDAY,
SEPTEMBER 19, 4:30 PM

ALCOA ROOM, BARCO LAW BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH

PANELISTS

Noble Maseru, Director, Pitt Center for Health Equity
Carlos Torres, Director, City of Pittsburgh Commission on Human Relations
Dawn Plummer, Director, Pittsburgh Food Policy Council
Leigh Patel, Associate Dean of Equity and Justice, University of Pittsburgh School of Education
Jackie Smith, Department of Sociology & Coordinator, Pittsburgh Human Rights City Alliance

MODERATOR

Michael Goodhart, Director, Global Studies Center and Professor of Political Science

GLOBAL STUDIES

YEAR OF PittGLOBAL

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY